Virginia Department of Energy Welcomes Glenn Davis as Agency Director

Richmond, Va.- The Virginia Department of Energy (Virginia Energy) welcomes Glenn Davis to fill the role as agency director. Governor Youngkin announced his appointment of Davis to the position on Friday.

"I am thrilled to have the opportunity to join the Virginia Department of Energy as we work to make Governor Youngkin's All-American, All-of-the-Above Energy Plan a reality for Virginia," said Davis. "With bold action and innovative solutions, we can drive meaningful progress and build a stronger, more resilient energy system that benefits all Virginians."

Davis was most recently serving the Commonwealth as a Delegate from Virginia Beach. He was first elected in 2014 and chaired the House's Education Committee and led the Governor's Cybersecurity and I.T. Transition team during his service. Davis was a technology business owner before leaving the private sector to join Virginia Energy.

The Virginia Department of Energy leads to the Commonwealth to a reliable and responsible energy future. Home to the State Energy Office and Geologic Survey, the agency also regulates mining and natural gas production. An economic development team within the agency also serves the southwestern part of Virginia, using data to team potential developers with formerly coal mined sites. It was first formed in 1985.
